

Everyone knows, everyone sees.
Paranoid delusions that first year,
Outside Jamie Hiede's office,
I awaited rejection.
Everyone knows, everyone sees!
Terror splashed upon the stonework,
Fingers tingled in terror,
Hyperventilation on my lips,
Sheldon at my door.
Everyone knows, everyone sees!

Today they all know, today they all see.
Realistic observations my last year.
Outside Mark Little's office,
I've learned of acceptance.
They all know, they all see!
Smiles plastered across this facework,
Fists sit in pockets,
Hypertension about this topic,
I'm locked in my room,
They all know, they all see.

When everyone knows,
I don't know what to say,
When everyone sees,
I don't know what to do!
When everyone talks,
Who am I to say?
When everyone gawks,
Why can't I get away?
When everyone knows,
Why can't I just be normal?
When everyone sees,
I long to be invisible.
When everyone speaks,
When everyone shrieks,
When everyone voices,
When everyone laughs,
I just want to close these ears,
I just want to stop these tears.

Everyone knows, everyone sees.
Can I just be me, please?
